

TSIS WORKSHEET ON QUOTING

ENGL 108 / SEC. H & I / SUMMER LEAP 2009 / OLDHAM & RUBASKY / CHANG & LEE

Introducing Quotations

In order to write a solid and detailed close reading, you will need to provide evidence from the text. There are a variety of ways that you can do this. Two important ways are to paraphrase what an author writes (while still giving him/her credit for the original ideas) and to quote from the text directly. This exercise should help you to collect some of your evidence, which will in turn help you to write your paper.

In Part One, you will need to put Freire's words in your own words (also called paraphrasing), while in Part 2, you will be quoting directly. Also, pay attention to citation format.

Part One: They Say

- In his essay, Freire suggests that _____

_____ ().
- In his essay, Freire questions whether _____

_____ ().
- Although Freire does not say so directly, he apparently assumes that _____

_____ ().

Part Two: Quoting What They Say

- Freire states, “ _____

_____ ” ().
- According to Freire, “ _____

_____ ”
- In his essay, Freire maintains that “ _____

_____ ” ().
- Freire complicates matters further when he writes, “ _____

_____ ” ().
