2012 BUYER'S GUIDE

What the vendors enter is exactly what you get.

Four Ways to Use This Directory

This printed edition of the CIL Buyer's Guide consists of four sections:

Products and Services by Category

Various types of hardware, software, supplies, and services related to library automation are listed in the first section. We've also listed many types of content collections that are sold or licensed. Got an idea of the general type of product you want? Look here to find out who sells or distributes it. The categories are extensive, so you should be able to find whatever you need.

Products and Services by Vendor

This is an inverse listing of the previous section, which collates all of the products and services offered by one company under its name. Look up vendors alphabetically to find out everything that a given company has to offer. To help you navigate the lists of products and services under each vendor name, we've broken them down by subcategory.

Addresses of Companies

This section is the heart of the Guide—the complete and up-to-date listing of addresses, phone/fax numbers, email addresses, and URLs for all the companies, distributors, and suppliers that list in the Guide. Once you've found something you want to buy, use this section to figure out how to contact the company.

Addresses of Consultants

One aim of the Buyer's Guide has always been to draw attention to consultants. This section lists only companies that do consulting work, so it may come in handy when you are contemplating change, seeking outside help, or writing a technology plan.

About the Guide

We gather new data directly from companies, using online survey forms. With our current system, whatever vendors enter online becomes part of our database, without any intermediaries doing data entry or fact-checking. So what the vendors enter is exactly what you get.

All companies in this industry are welcome to have free listings printed here and entered in the online version. We make every attempt to ensure accuracy and completeness, but human (or computer) error is always a possibility. If you find any inaccuracies, please let the vendor know.

For buyers, the online version makes it easier to search by keyword, company, or category. What's more, vendors can now log in to their records anytime and update their listings. So our online version will always be up-to-date. Right now, what you see in print is all of the listings that vendors updated by our print-production deadline. ∎
